

Dear FCC, I am an XM radio listener I love my XM. I am also a truck driver and the traffic and weather channels are a big help in planning my work day. By using the traffic channels I can avoid traffic backups and make my day more productive. The XM radio is a must in my line of work. With the new hours of service rules I need all the information I can get to stay rolling and productive, Not sitting in traffic. We XM listeners purchase our service and it should be left alone it is a business like many others and I think we have a fundamental right to our service. For example there is regular TV and cable and satellite TV. XM is similar, Just a little competition in the radio business. Free enterprise. With cable and satellite TV we can watch and purchase what we want. maybe we need to put more limits on television Have you seen some of the shows on those channels just like porn. XM is very good at what they do and provide an excellent service that benefits me in work and home life. Please leave free enterprise alone. It sounds to me like someone does not like a little competition. I guess you could say that XM provides a public safety service by having weather and traffic channels. By helping us to stay rolling down the highway we can get full use of our very costly fuel not sitting in traffic or being caught in bad weather. I vote to leave XM alone let them run their business they have done a fine job so far and are a benefit in my life and at work.
